PRESIDENT'S SERMON

YEAR TWO

We have just completed our first year as a paid membership non-profit (501C) association. Our paid membership has grown to about one hundred and fifty members.

I believe that our demonstration at the Republican National Convention, where about 50 percent of our membership (at that time) participated, was the onset of a new sense of confidence and optimism for many NYC Atheist members.

For 2005, our key objective continues to be membership growth and involvement, and focus upon separation of church and state issues.

Additional 2005 key activities must include: Community outreach, members' social and support networks, essay awards for high school and college students and a second street-tabling capability, Longer-term objectives include a charter school (non-faith-based) educational program; coffee/book shop; expanded media contacts; high profile lecture/debate series; conferences; Speakers' Bureau; paid staff; our own facilities and the additional development and sponsoring of Atheist-oriented theatre productions.

I look forward to working with the membership in the continued development, growth and success of NYC Atheists Inc.

JOIN/RENEW NYC ATHEISTS MEMBERSHIP. ONLY THROUGH A LARGE AND INVOLVED MEMBERSHIP CAN WE CONTINUE OUR PROGRESS AND HAVE AN IMPACT.

CHRISTOPHER HITCHENS

Creationism is Helping in the Dumbing Down of America

by Kenneth Bronstein

On January 19th I attended a Christopher Hitchens' lecture, at which, during the Q&A, he said "Religion is a disease of the mind and the surrender of reason." Later that evening, it hit me: Now I know one of the reasons why the American educational system seriously lags behind other developed nations. How can a nation, in which 30-70 percent of its population believes that Creationism is the truth and that it's not possible that we (humans, animals, etc.), came from a common descendent or evolved. Millions of Americans also believe that the Earth is only seven thousand years old, that prayer can cure illness and that natural disasters are god's response to evil and sin.

The Creationism/Evolution debate has very serious impacts on two groups:

Students: They are told by their parents/minister/priest /rabbi that their teachers /schools are teaching them untruths. Not only does this confuse the student, but it destroys the trust between the student and teacher /school. Some students extend this negativism to concluding that school/education is a waste of time.

The parents: They are more interested in using the education system to support their faith than to educate the child. Why support the school system? They could vote down all school budgets and/or pull their child out of the school system.

Until we in America want an educational system that focuses upon reality, reasoning, critical thinking and analysis, the educational gap between the United States and the other industrial countries will continue to widen.

Simply put, the religious zealots are trying to use the educational system to perpetuate THE BIG LIE.

Madalyn Murray O'Hair had a great line: Without religion we could have landed a man on the moon one thousand years earlier.

THE SMART SPECIES

One day the zookeeper noticed that the orangutan was reading two books - the Bible and Darwin’s Origin of Species.

Surprised, the zookeeper asked the ape, “Why are you reading both those books?”

“Well,” said the orangutan, “I just wanted to know if I was my brother.”

REHNQUIST: A RADICAL ACTIVIST
JUDGE?

By Ron Widelec

When a Judge stands up and speaks out against the ultra-right-wing agenda of the Republican Party, one usually expects him to be a so-called “liberal activist judge.” However, as the right-wing agenda reaches new levels of absurdity, even the highly conservative Supreme Court Chief Justice William Rehnquist can’t help but speak out.

In his recent year-end report
on the federal judiciary, Chief Justice Rehnquist spoke out against the recent attacks by right-wing senators and representatives on the courts. Congress, while in the grips of a right-wing majority, has attempted to pass numerous unconstitutional laws. The balance of power, as designed by the founding fathers, took effect and the courts have declared these laws unconstitutional and thus void.
Although one of the key functions of the federal court system is to determine the constitutionality of laws (and overturn those that are deemed unconstitutional), now the courts have come under attack for fulfilling this role. The phrase ‘liberal activist judges, legislating
from the bench’ has been heard from numerous congressmen and even the President.

Thwarted by the courts in their attempts to trample the constitution, right-wingers have decided to simply do away with the balance of power that our forefathers felt was so important.
Rehnquist mentioned the recent suggestions to “impeach federal judges who issue decisions regarded by some as out of the mainstream.” To many conservatives, “out of the mainstream” means anything with which they disagree.

Also mentioned by Rehnquist were “bills introduced in the last Congress that would limit the jurisdiction of the federal courts to decide constitutional challenges of certain kinds of government action.” Right-wingers in Congress have been attacking the separation of church and state for some time
now. Unfortunately for them, a minor speed bump known as the Constitution of the United States has gotten in the way. To stop the courts from bringing up that little ‘constitution thing,’ Congressional right-wingers have tried to pass laws that would disallow the federal courts to hear cases dealing with the expression ‘under god’ in the pledge, the displaying of the Ten Commandments in courts and issues dealing with same-sex marriage.

Such rules would “destroy judicial independence” according to Rehnquist. Perhaps the opposition of a conservative Supreme Court Chief Justice can finally help the ultra-conservative right-wing see that their agenda goes against everything upon which this nation was founded.
However, with Rehnquist likely to retire this year, and his most likely replacements being the theocratic
Antonin Scalia or Clarence Thomas, the right-wing agenda of constitutional deconstruction shows little sign of slowing.

AS RELIGION TAKES THE NATIONAL STAGE, A BOON FOR THE FAITHLESS

By Sam Knight

New York Times, 1/9/05

At the latest meeting of the New York City Atheists, Ken Bronstein, the group's forthright president, shared good news.

"Let me just tell you," Mr. Bronstein said to a room of about 20 members who gathered on a recent Friday evening. "In the last three months, the acceptance of atheism and atheists has gone up dramatically in this country.

"George Bush has been our greatest ally," Mr. Bronstein went on, as his members ate salami and cheese sandwiches in a rented conference room in a Midtown office building. "I have just seen a sea change out there, especially since the election."

The New York City Atheists, an affiliate of American Atheists, a national group based in Cranford, N.J., had been bumbling along with 25 or so members for much of last year. But in recent weeks, the number has jumped to 125. Or, as Mr. Bronstein puts it, "We've really grown this thing."

He attributes part of the mini-surge in nonbelievers to the increased visibility of the group - it operates tables at street fairs and has a local cable television show filmed in Mr. Bronstein's Upper East Side apartment - and the rest to a faithless boomlet of sorts that has infused atheist groups across the country with new members and has spurred discussions about efforts to unite as a political force, especially as religious groups flex their muscles.

The Council for Secular Humanism, for instance, which describes itself as "North America's leading organization for nonreligious people," has experienced an "explosive" growth in membership since the election, according to its chairman, Paul Kurtz. And Barry Lynn, executive director of Americans United for Separation of Church and State, a Washington-based religious watchdog group, described what was happening in New York as "a response from people who are frightened that the evangelical right is literally trying to take over the country."

Or, as Mr. Bronstein puts it, "People do not like to be told what is right and wrong."

The membership surge has given New York atheists the confidence to act on their convictions. Mr. Bronstein, for instance, spent much of autumn seeking permission to erect a stall in Bryant Park, to ensure the presence of a skeptical note amid the religious voices. When fully assembled, the atheists' stall is draped in yellow banners demanding the separation of church and state, and is attended by members wearing smart blue baseball caps.

"Here's our real position," he said. "We don't like any religious display in public places. But since I can't stop it, I join it." Mr. Bronstein's flock appreciates his efforts. "He has the leadership we need," said Edith Amster, one of the group's loyalists, "and he knows how to articulate the separation of church and state."

But that's not to say that managing an atheist society is straightforward. Even in a group of nonbelievers, there will always be room for a little doubt.

VINCENT VAN GOGH, DUTCH PAINTER

"I can very well do without God both in my life and in my painting, but I cannot, suffering as I am, do without something which is greater than I am, which is my life, the power to create."

At the Friday meeting, for instance, Mr. Bronstein asked if there were any questions.

"Er, I'm pretty new to the group, but I have a question," Bob Grize said. "I was wondering about the name, New York City Atheists. 'Atheists' kind of has bad connotations. What about 'free thinkers'?"

Two days later, Mr. Bronstein was at work again, tending the group's stall on the sidewalk outside Bryant Park. As he took down the group's yellow signs, a slow-drifting crowd of tourists came by. As two Japanese women stopped to take a leaflet, Mr. Bronstein nodded approvingly.

PHILOSOPHER, EDUCATOR, MATHEMATICIAN, AND SOCIAL
CRITIC (1872-1970).

“Religion is based . . . mainly on fear . . . fear of the mysterious, fear of defeat, fear of death. Fear is the parent of cruelty, and therefore it is no wonder if cruelty and religion have gone hand in hand. . . . My own view on religion is that of Lucretius. I regard it as a disease born of fear and as a source of untold misery to the human race.”

“Fear is the parent of cruelty, therefore it is no wonder if religion and cruelty have gone hand-in-hand.”

“I believe that when I die I shall rot, and nothing of my ego will survive. I am not young, and I love life. But I should scorn to shiver with terror at the thought of annihilation. Happiness is none the less true happiness because it must come to an end, nor do thought and love lose their value because they are not everlasting.”

“I am myself a dissenter from all known religions, and I hope that every kind of religious belief will die out.”

Disappointing Realities

Married Born-Again adults are just as likely as non-Born-Again adults to eventually become divorced

Faith has had a limited effect on people’s behavior, moral convictions and practices, relational activities, lifestyle choices or economic practices.

MADAYLN O’HAIR QUOTE:
99% OF PEOPLE IN U.S.
JAILS ARE CHRISTIANS.

Elements that reflect more intense personal involvement in faith or a relationship with Christ are among the least common sources of people’s spiritual fulfillment.

Only 8 percent of teenagers consider music piracy—defined as copying their CD’s for friends and making unauthorized downloads of music from the Internet—to be morally wrong.

A mere seven percent of Born Again adults tithed last year.

Churches are difficult to reach. Only 55 percent of Protestant churches provided telephone callers with a human response to their call attempt after multiple attempts made at different times of the day on a succession of days—during the holiday season!

Born Again Christians and adults who attend Christian churches are more likely than atheists, agnostics, and adherents of non-Christian faiths to buy lottery tickets.
